

Typography

A clear grotesk system for large ideas, readable interfaces, and technical annotation. Display, body, and mono each have a distinct job.

TYPOGRAPHY

Three roles

PRIMARY

Inter Display

Headlines, wordmarks, major section titles

SECONDARY

Inter

Body copy, UI, captions, long-form reading

ACCENT

PT Mono

Labels, code, timing, tags, metadata

Inter Display

Hard ideas, made usable.

Use large, tight, and decisive. Lowercase is preferred for the sami / kmab identity.

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 0123456789

Inter body

Clarity before cleverness.

Complexity may be necessary; confusion is not. Use Inter for everything that needs to disappear into reading: project descriptions, case studies, navigation, forms, and explanatory copy. Keep line length between 45 and 75 characters and allow generous leading.

400 Regular

500 Medium

600 SemiBold

700 Bold

BODY SCALE

PT Mono

SPLIT 01 / PERSONAL BEST

const idea = hardProblem => usableArtifact;

SIDE QUEST · PLAYABLE

Use PT Mono for small amounts of metadata, code, labels, and timing language. It should feel like instrumentation, not nostalgia.

Hierarchy

DISPLAY XL	72-128 / 0.92	Inter Display 700	Hero statements
H1	48-64 / 1.00	Inter Display 700	Page title
H2	32-48 / 1.08	Inter Display 650	Section title
H3	24 / 1.15	Inter Display 650	Card or subsection
BODY LG	20 / 1.60	Inter 400	Lead paragraph
BODY	16 / 1.65	Inter 400	Default reading
LABEL	12 / 1.20	PT Mono 700	Metadata / tags

Editorial rhythm

OBSERVATION

Rustling. The sound of a page turning.

Start with something concrete. Let the sentence establish a scene or problem before explaining what it means.

TECHNICAL CLAIM

A small system should still feel complete.

Use evidence, constraints, and outcomes. Avoid inflated language and generic “innovation” claims.

Do / do not

DO

- Use sentence case.
- Keep display tracking tight.
- Use mono sparingly and consistently.
- Use weight before adding extra colors.
- Prefer 45–75 characters per body line.

DO NOT

- Set long paragraphs in mono.
- Use all caps for major headlines.
- Stretch or fake font weights.
- Use more than three families.
- Reduce body text below 14 px for core content.

Font binaries are not included. Use `DOWNLOAD_FONTS.md` and `font-manifest.json` for official sources and installation details.
